

THE DAILY REBEL.

GRiffin, Ga.

THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 7, 1861.

MORNING EDITION.

The Yankee Anaconda is just now exhibiting very considerable evidences of vitality—throughout the whole circumference of our territory he is making desperate efforts to break through the crust of the rebellion. In Virginia and North Georgia, he is making his mightiest efforts, but he is shaking himself about Savannah, Charleston, at Jackson, Mississippi, and in North Mississippi—appears to be a simultaneous effort from every direction to overpower us and tax our powers of resistance. It is to no purpose however to prospect for many flattering promises of such success to the foe. Gen. Lee has baffled all their schemes in Virginia, and will continue to do so; they will find themselves checkmated at Savannah; Charleston is fully able to repel all assault, and even to capture her assailants; nothing can be gained by them at Jackson, for they devas the country in the Sherman raid, and in North Mississippi the War Eagle waits impotently for the prey which is advancing towards him from Meade's.

Such exhibitions as the Lincoln government makes would at one time have been history of the war, have around the approach of our people, but they have seen that the world displays so often that they regard them with contempt and indifference.

The movements of the enemy's coast, and in the west, are rather spasmodic in our people, or our foes appreciate the difficulties of their two grand armies, and are driven to those nonchalant expedients and entanglements for the purpose of diverting a portion of our forces from their fronts, and thus weaken ourselves at the points at which they most desire success—Richmond and Atlanta. But they will not that their tricks are transparent as glass and that to the sagacity of our leaders the sun shines through them.

A private letter to the editor from a highly intelligent and gallant officer of the army of Tennessee, not intended for publication, thus speaks of three of the best officers in that army. The compliment is all the more valuable that they were not intended for the public eye, and were written in the freedom of friendly correspondence under the rain of shell from the enemy's batteries, in almost illegible pencil marks:

"Col. Jno. G. Carter (our temporary Brigade commander) has added greatly to his reputation as a military man, since this campaign opened—he has the entire confidence of the officers and men of his Brigade, and if a vacancy should exist, we would be more acceptable as a Brigade commander. Genls. Cheatham and Hardee, his immediate superiors, highly appreciate him as a commander, and the latter has recommended him for promotion for gallantry upon the field. Unless we have a very short war, or rather early peace, you may write down as certain, that we will have a very considerable military leader in our friend, Napoleon's dimensions, Col. Jno. G. Carter."

Gen. Cheatham is the most indefatigable working man in this army. He has a head full of brains and experience has made him practical and successful.

This campaign has brought us in close contact with General Hardee, for whom we have the highest admiration and in whom we have the utmost confidence. History will place him along with the greatest military men of his day, and scarcely inferior to any of them. Sandhills, rain, storm and sun our Corps and Division commanders always at their posts.

Gen. Johnson's present position on the Chattahoochee is strong, both by nature and art. His engineers have been there before him with an army of laborers, selecting the best positions, and strengthening them with redoubts and entrenchments. In order to effectually flank him, the flanking column will be compelled to cross the Chattahoochee and expose themselves to be cut off from supports and thus be attacked by a superior force and forced to surrender or retreat at a disadvantage.

In the present situation there is nothing to discourage the people. We are sorry to see some of our contemporaries indulging in a vein of reflections which indicate that they are unduly influenced by the late movement. The troops are buoyant and see nothing to desist them. Why should the people or the press be less confident?

From Sherman's Army.

The Louisville Journal, of the 7th ult., under the caption of "From Sherman's Army—Capture of Trains—Raids in his Rear—Johnson's Position—Rebel News"—gives the following items. The news from Atlanta is particularly interesting. The Journal says:

"On Saturday morning, the 2d ult., the rebel Gen. Hardee, with 2,000 men, made a raid on Sherman's rear, and interrupted the time his engineers had been engaged in fortifying the fort, &c., secured the rocks, and still held the entire garrison, & in their heart of negroes, to rebels and yankees. This noble work was done by parts of Clusters' and H. McRae's regiments, composed of Bell's and McRae's, commanded by Brigadier General C. Almey, and for his gallantry on this and other occasions, Col. Clusters deserves the enduring name of 'Cluster'."

For the gallantry shown and enterprise displayed gallantly. Congress has voted you complimentary resolutions of thanks and tendered you a nation's homage.

But the morning glory of your great deeds has faded away. That same day, the rebels dashed their strongly fortified position on the Chattooga river. They had a dexterous retreat, and arrived in safety, having lost only a few men.
